AFFAIRS IN ALEXANDRIA. Funeral Services Over Remains of Two Citizens-General Items. Evening Star Bureau,

No. 701 King street. Bell Telephone No. 106. ALEXANDRIA, Va., February 11, 1901. Funeral services over the remains of Dr. Julius Dienelt, whose death occurred Sunday morning, will be held tomorrow No. 108 South Columbus street. Interment will be made in Ivy Hill cemetery. Dr. Dienelt's death was due to pneumonia, which developed from a recent attack of grip. He was seventy-three years of age, and is survived by a widow and six grown children. Deceased was a native of Germany, but resided here the major portion of his life. For several years he engaged in the practice of dentistry, but retired from that profession, and about time of his death he was employed as bookkeeper for the Alexandria Steam Bread Bakery. Dr. Dienelt was a leading citizen. His death is generally regretted in Alexandria. The funeral of Edward Bohraus, whose death occurred in Philadelphia Saturday morning, took place this afternoon from the residence of his mother, Mrs. Christiana Bohraus, corner Prince and Royal streets. Rev. Mr. Leucke of Immanuel Lu-theran Church, conducted the services. Interment was made in Bethel cemetery. Many friends and relatives of the deceased attended the funeral, among them being the members of the Relief Hook and Ladder Fire Company, to which Mr. Bohraus belonged. A meeting of that organization was held yesterday afternoon and a committee appointed to draft resolutions of re-spect to the memory of the deceased. Announcement was made in the churches yesterday of special mission services to be held at the Railroad Reading Rooms, cor-ner of Henry and Wolfe streets, commencing tomorrow evening. Meetings will be held every night except Saturday up to and including Tuesday, the 19th instant. The exercises will be under the direction of The exercises will be under the Rev. Hugo Lacey of Leesburg.

The Berkley Brotherhood of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church held its regular meeting Sunday afternoon. Rev. W. H. H. Smith of Washington delivered an address before a large audience.

citizens of the difficulties they are liable to get into when they leave the United States. This is a move in the right direction; but why should it not be carried further? Why should not we, who by right of birth are citizens of the United States, receive some sort of admonition as to the penalties imposed and the modicum of protection grantat the late residence of the deceased, ed us in foreign countries; or, better said, the total lack of the latter? Hundreds of artisans and laborers leave this country every year who are ignorant of the fact that passports are issued by the United States to its citizens, and who would not know how to proceed to get one if they had the means. These people cherish the idea that the stars and stripes will guarantee them at least a fair trial for any offense they might perhaps unwittingly be guilty of (or innocent, as the case might be). But such is not true.

It has been my misfortune to see Americans subjected to the ignomy of arrest and incarceration in pens that reek with filth and vermin, and to know of their be-ing refused the right of an audience or communication with the consul. And in rare cases, where this privilege is granted, it is still more rare for that gentleman to pay any attention to the prayer of his fellow eitizen. Many Americans are compelled to appeal to the English consul for the aid that should be granted by their own rep-resentative. Two cases that came under my personal observation in Guatemala may serve to show the treatment accorded us abroad. The first was the case of an old sallor who served as engineer in the Mis-sissippi blockading squadron, and who had an honorable discharge for such service in his pocket at the time of arrest. His name is McGrath. He caught a pickpocket in the act of relieving him of his watch, and was administering the fellow a good punching when he was arrested. I interpreted for him both to the police making the arrest and to the judge who examined him at the station. He was sentenced to three weeks in the penitentiary, and incidentally given seven lashes with a cat-of-nine-tails for demanding an audience with the American minister. I went to see the minister, and one of his people told me to tell him to "keep out of trouble."

The second was a negro who worked for M. E. Jessup, general freight agent of the Guatemala Central railway. His offense was attempting to assist a native Guate-malan, who had been stabbed, to a doctor.

week I notice that the government has judge told me in conversation on the mattaken measures to notify its foreign-born ter some time afterward that the crime had been committed by a negro, and that as negroes, like turkey buzzards, could not be told apart, it was right that a negro should suffer for it. I could cite other cases, but these suffice

To give all Americans a knowledge of what to expect in foreign countries before leaving this, why not compel transporta-tion lines to furnish its patrons a neat, concise resume of just what protection they are entitled to and how to proceed toward an attainment of the same. Such a knowledge would deter many from leaving this country.

Bonds Secreted So Securely as to Escape Observation of Thieves.

Last Friday some boys were playing about culvert near Dunn-Loring and were attracted by the shining links of a surveyor's chain. Upon further search they discovered $10 (stamps, $1.50). bundles of papers, burned beyond recognition, and a box with the top torn off. Mr. August Henning, secretary of the grange, whose apartments were robbed about a month ago, as stated in The Star at the time, and who has made the old hotel at Dunn-Loring his headquarters for nearly ten years past, repaired to the spot upon being notified of the discovery, and, hastily grasping the box out of a boy's hand, removed the false bottom, which had not been perceived by the thieves, and found three $1,000 United States bonds intact. Two bonds, with several coupons, which had been placed on top of the secret receptacle were, of course, missing. Mr. Henning's friends heartly rejoice with him over his lucky find which he coup heartly then the arthy rejoice with him over his lucky find, which, he says, he will at once deposit in the city, where thieves are not likely to break through and steal.

MOUSE INCIDENT EXPLAINED. Convict Says It Was Placed in Food by a Prisoner. Referring to the mouse episode at the District jail a few days ago, Mr. James H.

Harris, the warden of the prison, stated to a reporter of The Star today that Albert F. Chase, the prisoner who sent a letter to a local newspaper calling attention to a mouse having been served in the food, and also making other statements regarding the food not being fit to eat, etc., admitted to one of the guards while going over to Moundsville, W. Va., recently that he did not see the mouse put in the box, but that it was well understood in the wing that the mouse was put in the box by a prisoner after the food had been served to the prisoners. Chase stated that the object guards of that wing, who was disliked by ome of the prisoners. He said also that his statement in reference to other food be-"It has been ascertained," said Warden Harris, "since the officers returned from Moundsville that Chase did not write the letter himself; that he could not write, but that he procured the services of a white man in the jail to write it. Charles Lee, another one of the prisoners taken at the same time to Moundsville, said the mouse was put in the box by a prisoner after the food had been served to the prisoners, and that it was all done for spite work.

"My investigation practically disclosed all these facts some time ago, but an admission on the part of the prisoners makes it absolutely certain that it was done in that way. I have also taken some steps lately to ascertain how the bill of fare at the jail compares with other institutions of a like nature, and I find that the bill of fare at the jail is fully up to any other of a similar character, so far as I am able to learn. The best prisoners in the jail never complain about the food. "Samuel R. Beach, another one of the
